

You won't find many half-timbered houses in Los Angeles, but even that surprise pales by comparison to the interior: a theater of whimsy populated by puppets and parakeets. Come make a dramatic entrance with us, as we pass through the gothic archway to meet the players.

ungalow

TEXT BY VITTA POPLAR
STYLING BY SUNDAY HENDRICKSON PHOTOGRAPHY BY BARBARA ELLIOTT MARTIN

creativity.

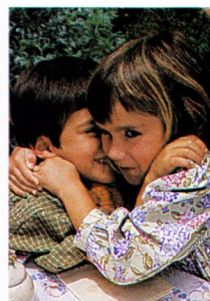

From humble bungalow
to elegant retreat—
on a flea-market budget

$4.95
$6.95 Canada

AUGUST & SEPTEMBER

For the final act,
the production
shifts outdoors,
where garden
designer Eric Solberg created a secret hideaway
where the twins

take tea with
storybook friends,
BELOW
LEFT. Wisteria and grapevine provide the structure, while
'Karl Lagerfeld,'
'Angelface,' and
'Brandy' roses
supply soft mauve
and amber hues.

Even with all the changes, the house
retains its essentially English
character, from the owner's Toby
jug-style teapot
collection, TOP,
to the nursery
itself, where framed storybook
pictures from an antique version
of "Peter Pan"
hang over the
twins' twin beds,
OPPOSITE.

fairy tale time

